

SUNFLOWER'S FRIEND

Written by

Carlos Lerma

Based on the poem, "My Sunflower Died - Today"

FADE IN:

EXT. MIDDLE OF THE OCEAN - DAY

We find ourselves in an island. Surrounded by water.

TITLES: "Sunflower's Friend"

EXT. TOP OF THE HILL - DAY

Water splashes on the rocks, and on a lonely house at the top of the hill.

From behind we find a robot watering it's plants.

The robot goes from side to side watering his plants.

It comes to the end of the line with a sunflower facing the ground.

CUT TO:

EXT. SKY ABOVE - DAY

The robot flies high and parts the cloud letting the sunshine through with a blast.

CUT TO:

EXT. OUTSIDE THE HOUSE / TOP OF THE HILL - DAY

Back in it's garden, he comes to find the Sunflower purposely looking the other way from where the sun is coming from.

The robot formulates a plan.

It will use mirrors to get the reflection to the other side, but the Sunflower manages to avoid sunshine at all costs.

The robot has an idea as he picks up the sunflower from the ground.

It will go to space to take the sunflower to the very sun.

CUT TO:

EXT. SPACE - NIGHT

He blasts off into space towards the sun.

He makes all the efforts possibles to make the sunflower see the sun, but the sunflower uses it's leaves to block the sun nonetheless.

DISSOLVE TO:

INT. BOY'S ROOM - DAWN

A boy is laying down in his bed on a phone call.

The boy, sharing the same characteristics as the robot.

Red-ish hair that was identical to the red-ish tone of the robot's metal, and bright yellow glasses that resembled the robot's eyes.

The robot was the boy, in his imagination.

BOY

If I'm the only one making any efforts...

The boy sighs.

BOY (CONT'D) (CONT'D)

I don't want it. So, um... bye.

The boy hangs up the phone and tosses the phone onto the ground.
